

Dear Passenger,

In addition to your flight to/from Germany, you have also booked transfer by rail to/from a German airport. We look forward to welcoming you on board one of our trains.

This leaflet contains information on the service offered with your electronic ticket and how to collect the ticket. Please read the leaflet carefully and solely contact your flight booking agency or airline for any questions you may have.

Rail&Fly – the service offered

Rail&Fly contains the rail journey:

- on the entire DB rail network to/from any German airport
- on all DB trains (incl. ICE) except Thalys, DB Autozug, special trains
- but City Night Line and ICE Sprinter trains are subject to compulsory reservation and a supplement is charged which you can buy at any DB sales outlet
- Rail&Fly is valid on the day of departure in Germany, on the day of arrival in Germany and on the following day. Should you wish to start your journey one day prior to your flight departure in Germany, that is possible if it was noted when you booked. The first day of validity is governed by the date shown on your ticket.
- Journeys within regional transport associations are not permitted
- Journeys in the direction of your destination and timetable-related detours are permitted

How can you obtain your train ticket?

You can obtain your train ticket at any Deutsche Bahn ticket-vending machine for long-distance transport. First choose the language for the user menu you wish and follow the instructions for "Rail&Fly". For authentication purposes, enter your DB order code which will be forwarded to you by your booking agency. Repeat the input until all of your train tickets have been printed. Please do this only shortly before your departure but early enough before departure since after collecting restrictions concerning rebooking and cancellation appear. If you are not able to draw your ticket due to a technical fault, please make sure you draw the Rail&Fly ticket at the end of the onward train journey.

What do you require from your rail journey?

Your booking agency will give you one DB order code per person (aged 2 years or older) and a printout of your flight booking („Extended Itinerary“). Should you not receive these, be sure to contact your booking agency again. Please make sure you have all the following documents with you for the rail journey:

- ID card or passport
- flight booking confirmation with e-ticket number
- train ticket

If you have booked Rail&Fly for the outward and return journey, the train ticket is valid for both routes. Please keep your ticket safe since it will not be replaced if lost and you will have to buy a new ticket.

Where can you find your train connections to and from the airport?

For technical reasons, your itinerary sometimes includes departure and arrival times for DB connections to/from "Railway Germany". These times do not apply. Please contact DB Travel Centres or DB-licensed travel agencies, or go to www.bahn.de for information on your train connection on your particular day of travel. Please also note that delays may occur. Please select your train connections accordingly.

What to do when there is a change to the date of travel and/or route?

If the DB ticket does not contain the new travel data, please present the new itinerary and the printed ticket to the nearest DB Travel Centre. There, a relevant endorsement will be made on the ticket. The ticket is not valid on the train without this additional endorsement. For this reason, we should like to repeat our request not to collect your ticket until shortly before your departure.

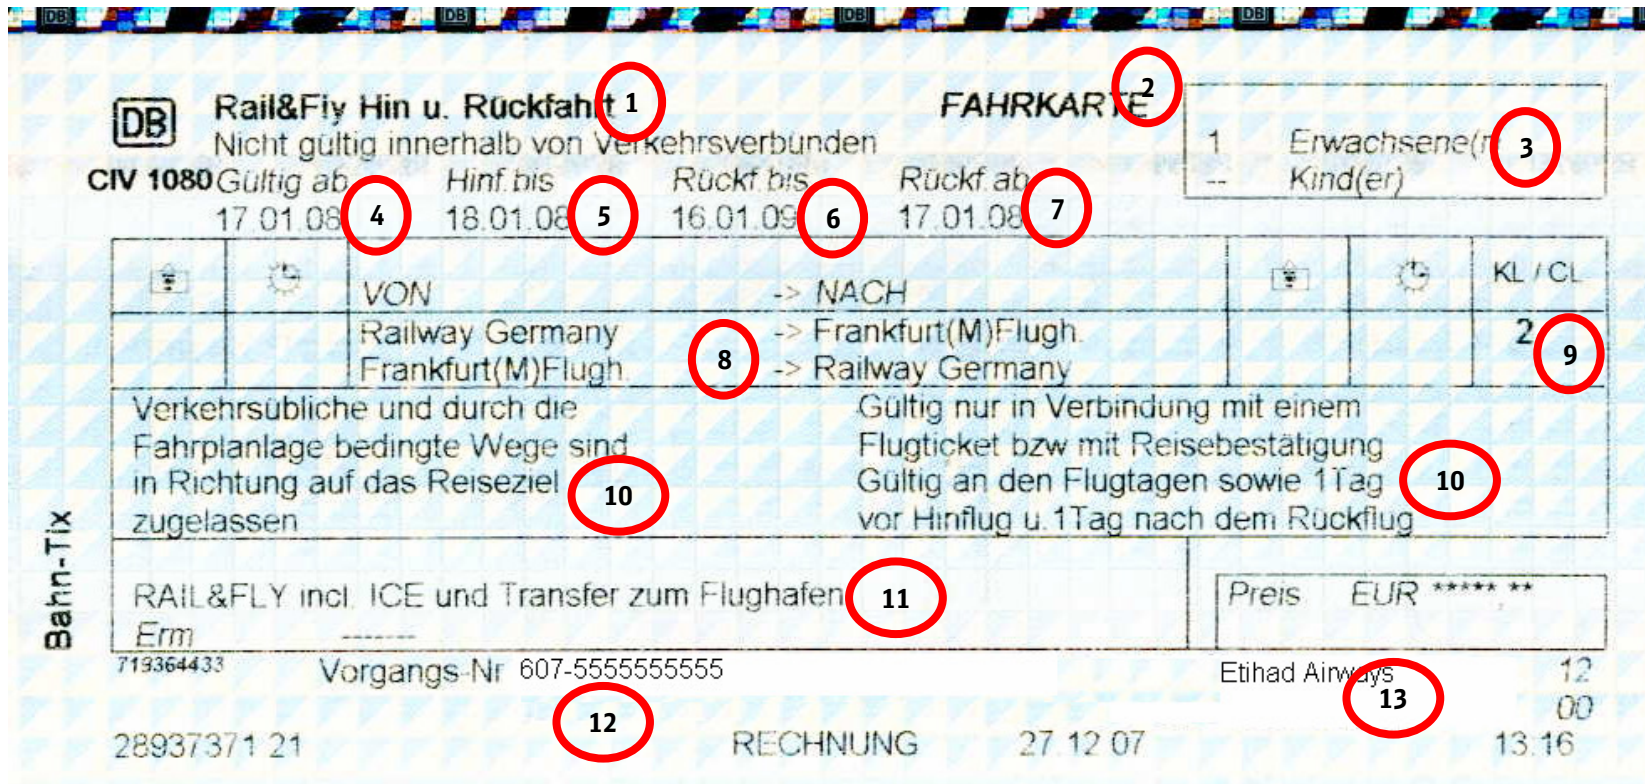

What can you do if you use your Rail&Fly ticket only in part or not at all?

Contact the agency at which you bought your air ticket. The airline requires the Rail&Fly ticket to be returned. Rebooking and cancellation fees vary from airline to airline. Your flight booking agency will provide further information.

The tickets are printed on heat-sensitive paper. Protect them from exposure to the sun, moisture and heat.

We wish you a pleasant journey.
